1964 MEN'S WORLD AMATEUR GOLF TEAM CHAMPIONSHIP

An Englishman cried tears of joy, and a young Japanese swapped neckties with a Westerner as the World Amateur Team Championship drew to a close at the Olgiata Golf Club in Rome in 1964.

The Englishman cried because a British men's amateur team had not only beaten the Americans for the first time in 28 years but had beaten the world for the first time in history. It was a great triumph for Great Britain and Ireland in a meeting with 32 other nations.

This was the fourth World Amateur Team Championship for the Eisenhower Trophy under the auspices of the World Amateur Golf Council. On each occasion, beginning in 1958, it has been won by an English-speaking nation rich in golf history. The first Championship was won by Australia, the next two by the United States, the fourth by Great Britain-Ireland.

But what meaning do these meetings have for such a country as Iceland, which at that time had 540 golfers and five courses—none with bunkers? Although Iceland's representatives at Rome did not break 80, they were avid students of swing styles; they left Rome hopeful of obtaining American professional instruction, and so the World Championship had special significance for them.

Malaysia's non-playing Captain found something at Rome which may help all the courses of his country. He was given information about improved grasses for putting greens developed in the United States.

And so there were values for the last teams as well as for the first, as is inevitable when golfers from 33 countries give their presence to one another.

The team of Great Britain and Ireland led after every round and at the end its margin was two strokes over Canada, 898-897. New Zealand was third with 900. The defending American team was fourth with 908.

The finish in the rain was classic. Keith Alexander needed birdies on the last five holes to bring Canada into a tie with Britain. He made four of them, but was bunkered on his approach to the home green. It was as courageous a golfing feat as could be imagined.

Britain's side was composed of Michael Broadhead, Michael Lunt, Ronald Shade and Rodney Foster. Behind the British scoring was a remarkable spirit engendered by the non-playing Captain, Joseph B. Carr.

On the second-place Canadian team... with Alexander were Gary Cowan, Douglas Silverberg and Nick Weslock; the non-playing Captain was W. Arthur Johnston, President of the Royal Canadian Golf Association. New Zealand passed the United States on the last day with a team comprising Edward McDougall, John Dury, Ross Murray and Stuart Jones; non-playing Captain was Philip L. Phillips.

The competition is 72 holes stroke play. Each team may have three or four players, and they play all four rounds; the team’s score consists of the best three individual scores in each round.

Under this scoring system, it counts heavily when several members of a team can mesh good scores in the same round; conversely, the debits are severe when that sort of coinciding is absent, and that’s the way it was with the defending Americans.

The United States was in the running until the closing round. After 54 holes the British led 671-676 over the United States and Canada, tied for second, and they held on to win the Championship on the rainy final day despite Alexander’s remarkable surge.

Although individual efforts are not officially recognized in the Team Championship, the world of golf salute a 24-year-old from the Republic of China (Taiwan) for returning the lowest 72-hole score. Min Nan Hsieh scored 72-77-72-75—294. Hsieh and his teammates were a threat for the Eisenhower Trophy from the start. They ran third in the first 18 holes and finally tied with Italy for sixth place. They were sixth two years before also. These are tremendous performances for a country which had only four golf courses, three of which were of nine holes.

Argentina produced second low scorer, Raul Travieso, with 225. Next came Keith Alexander, of Canada, and Ross Murray, of New Zealand, at 227.

It is a vast undertaking to entertain the World Championship and the problems are magnified in a country where golf is not a game of the people. But the Italian Golf Federation and the Olgiata Club were superb in the warmth of their hospitality and the efficiency of their preparations. President of both the Federation and the Club was Francesco Ruspoli Duca di Morignano. Prince Ruspoli was one of the organizers of the World Council in 1958. At the heart of Italy’s work was Count Giuseppe Sabini, Secretary of the Golf Federation. For two years he devoted himself to the preparations.

Low Scorer. Min Nan Hsieh of the Republic of China, whose 294 was the best individual score for 72 holes.
Delegates and Duffers Cup
A 36-hole handicap competition for the Delegates and Duffers Cup was held on Olgiata's nine-hole course prior to the Championship.

The winner was Count Giuseppe Sabini, who found time from his duties as Secretary of the Italian Golf Federation and chief organizer for the Championship to score a net of 150-139-142. Second was J. W. Wilson, Australia, 173-28-145.

Third was Julio Orvananos, Mexico, 160-141-145. There were 31 starters.

Low scorer in the 18-hole Guest Division was J. Porter Brinton, United States, 79-81 for 18 holes.

Meeting of World Council
The Biannual Meeting of the World Amateur Golf Council was held at the Olgiata Golf Club on October 6, 1964. Among the actions were:

1. Council sponsorship of a Women's World Amateur Team Championship beginning in 1966. A Women's Committee was appointed under the chairmanship of Vicomtesse de Saint-Sauveur, of France.

2. Acceptance of Mexico's invitation to entertain both men's and women's Championships in 1966.

3. Unanimous decision not to seek inclusion of golf in the Olympic and the Pan American Games.

Notation was made with regret of the passing of Shun Nomura, of Japan, and

In Custody. The President of the Italian Golf Federation, Prince Ruspoli (center), flanked by guards at the Castel Sant'Angelo and two members of Italy's team, Carlo Bordagna and Lorenzo Silva.

Officials. Officers and Administrative Committee of World Amateur Golf Council. From left: Philip L. Phillips, New Zealand; Julio Orvananos, Mexico; Jacques Leglise, France; Clarence W. Benedict, Joint Chairman, United States; Iain M. Stewart, Joint Chairman, Great Britain; Joseph C. Dey, Jr., Secretary, United States; Gerald H. Micklem, Great Britain; J. W. Wilson, Australia; Pearson R. Sorita, India. Absent: Hord W. Hardin, United States.

France's Players: Misses Claudine Cros, Brigitte Varangot and Catherine Lacoste, who won the first Women's World Amateur Team Championship. Miss Lacoste shared low individual honors with Miss Carol Sorensen, United States, at 294 for 72 holes.

1st WOMEN'S WORLD AMATEUR GOLF TEAM CHAMPIONSHIP

As entries began to arrive for the first Women's World Amateur Team Championship, apprehension began to mount. An entry of 15 to 17 teams had been expected, but 27 nations filed. Even though eventually two could not attend, 25 teams were present. In the end, the reasons for worry turned out to be the reasons for success.

The Women's World Amateur Team Championship was instituted by the French Golf Federation on a suggestion by the United States Golf Association. The first Championship was held at the St. Germain Golf Club, near Paris, and despite the initial apprehension it became an instant success. The weather was perfect, the crowds were large and the scoring, on the whole, was good.

France won by one stroke over the United States, 688-689. Each team was allowed three players; each day the two best individual scores made up the team's score. The sum of the four daily totals gave the team total for the Espirito Santo Trophy.

Paced by Miss Catherine Lacoste who began with rounds of 72 and 71, France led by one stroke after the first round and by two over the United States at the end of two rounds. England was third, another two strokes behind, and Canada trailed by 12 strokes.

Miss Carol Sorensen, with 72, and Miss Barbara Fay White, with 73, sent the United States into the lead after three rounds, 440-441.

The finish on the fourth day was close, with considerable pressure. For France, Miss Brigitte Varangot had 77 and Miss Claudine Cros 74, while for the United States Miss White had 76 and Miss Sorensen 78.

With the United States Champion, Miss Barbara McIntire, and Miss Lacoste still on the course, the United States led by two strokes. After 14 holes Miss McIntire was even with par. Until the par-3 16th hole Miss Lacoste was one below par. Miss Lacoste had a 5 at 16 and then, believing that she had lost the Championship for France, she played the two final holes superbly, scoring 4s on each of them and finishing with 72.

Then Miss McIntire became bunker on each of the last two holes, taking five at the 17th and six at the 18th, losing three strokes to Miss Lacoste. Therein lay the one-stroke margin by which France won.

The low individual scorers for the 72 holes were Misses Sorensen and Lacoste. Both had 294—six strokes above par for the St. Germain Club.

This first Championship was held under the able chairmanship of the Vicomtesse de Saint-Saever. The following week the World Amateur Golf Council agreed to sponsor the Women’s Team Championship starting in 1966 and the Vicomtesse was named Chairman of the Council’s Women’s Committee.

The Prize. The Espirito Santo Trophy, presented as permanent prize for the Women’s World Amateur Team Championship by Mrs. Ricardo Espirito Santo of Portugal.

Hostesses. The French Golf Federation, leaving nothing undone, assigned individual hostesses to each team.
