1970 MEN'S TEAM CHAMPIONSHIP

Since its beginnings in 1958, the World Team Championship for the Eisenhower Trophy has been truly an amateur event, primarily for the players. It is also a gathering of the nations, to compete together and to enjoy one another's company—and also to provide entertaining watching for spectators who may attend.

It was therefore encouraging when representatives of 36 nations entered the sixth World Amateur Team Championship at the Real Club de la Puerta de Hierro in Madrid, Spain, in September, 1970. This was the most ever to compete, a circumstance that must give comfort to those farsighted pioneers who organized the World Amateur Golf Council at the dawn of the age of jet airplane travel.

No matter that the United States won its fourth Championship, and rather handily at that; the really important development was the interest shown in friendly competition by so many peoples of differing backgrounds, races and national origins.

Look at some of the countries who attended—Papua/New Guinea, Finland, Peru, Pakistan, Iceland, Korea, Bermuda, Italy, the Republic of China. How diverse a gathering.

And yet even this fulfillment of the competition's purpose could not overshadow the victory of the United States Team. The Americans had a total score of 854 and won by 15 strokes over New Zealand, with 869.

The United States brought a particularly strong team to Spain, including Lanny Wadkins, who had won the United States Amateur Championship earlier in the month, and Tom Kite, Jr., who had finished second to Wadkins by one stroke. The other members of the United States Team were Marvin Giles, III, runnerup in the U.S. Amateur the three preceding years, and Allen L. Miller, III.

At the end of the first round, however, it looked as if the Americans would be Delegates and Duffers Cup

The Republic of China has but 13 golf courses for its 5,000 golfers, but those who play them must play well. K.U. Chang, who plays to a 15 handicap, had a 36-hole net score of 140 and won the Delegates and Duffers Cup. George Wardman, of Bermuda, was second with net 144. Wardman has a 4 stroke handicap. Edward L. Meister, Jr., of the United States, won the guest division with 139.

Meeting of World Council

At the biennial meeting of the World Amateur Golf Council the format for the World Senior Amateur Championship was changed. Beginning with the 1971 World Senior Amateur Championship at the Fuji Golf Course in Kawana, Japan, the format will be as follows:

Thirty-six holes of stroke play by each four-man team, followed by singles match play in flights of four. The Number 1 players on two opposing teams will compete for a point, the Number 2 players will compete for a point, and so on. The team with the most points will win. The four lowest-scoring teams in the 36-hole qualifying round will comprise the Championship flight; the four teams in positions five through eight will comprise the Second Flight; and so on.

Previously the format for the World Senior Amateur Championship was four rounds of stroke play with the three lowest scores from each team counting toward a daily Team Score.

THE 1970 WOMEN'S TEAM CHAMPIONSHIP

In the mid 1930s one of the bitter battles of the Spanish Civil War raged over the valleys near what is now the R.S.H.E. Club de Campo.

Playing the fourth Women's World Amateur in such a setting brought home to the participants once more the principal purpose behind formation of the World Amateur Golf Council: to promote friendship and sportsmanship among people.

Twenty-two countries entered teams, the most since the inaugural Championship in 1964, and it was good to see among them three countries that had not sent women's teams before—Uruguay, Switzerland and Norway.

In contrast to the men's event a week earlier, a competition in the Women's Championship was intense, and the issue was decided on the very last hole when Miss Martha Wilkinson sank a two-foot putt to give the United States a one-stroke victory. The United States had a team total of 598 and France 599. South Africa was another seven strokes behind France at 606.

France took a four-stroke lead in the first round behind a 70 by Mrs. Claudine Cros-Rubin and 71 by Miss Brigitte Varangot for a team total of 141. Miss Jane Bastaunchry and Miss Cynthia Hill, meanwhile, combined for 145 for the United States.

France then increased its lead to seven strokes as Mrs. Catherine Lacoste de Prado scored 74.

The Americans cut their deficit to two strokes after 54 holes as Miss Bastaunchry shot 75 and Miss Wilkinson 75 in the third round, setting the stage for the dramatic final round and a confrontation between Mrs. de Prado, the 1969 United States Women's Amateur Champion, and Miss Wilkinson, her successor.

They were grouped together for the fourth round, and after nine holes they were stroke-for-stroke. Then on the final nine holes Miss Wilkinson played steadily, but Mrs. de Prado could not keep control of her game. She missed a 30-inch putt on the 10th, was short coming into the 491-yard par 5 12th, missed a three-foot putt on the 15th, and three-putted from 25 feet on the 16th. She was then four strokes behind Miss Wilkinson and the good French lead was gone. The French trailed by one stroke at the 18th, and to bring on a tie Mrs. de Prado had to hole a 30-footer. When it missed, and Miss Wilkinson sank her putt from two feet the United States had won its third straight women's Championship.

Individual awards are never given, but it is worth noting that Miss Sally Knight Little of South Africa was the only player able to break 300 for the four rounds on the R.S.H.E. Club de Campo course.

Everyone seemed to enjoy their golf, not the least Miss Masuyo Toyama, whose scores made an admirable downward progression—91-87-83-76.
